TROOPS ON GUARD AS MINES REOPEN

MASSIE MAINTAINS ORIGINAL STORY OF HAWAIIAN SLAYING

Prosecutor Unable To Crack Testimony
Of Lieutenant

HONOLULU, T. H., April 19.—A puzzled jury of varied races looked to Lt. Thomas H. Massie's three co-defendants in the honor slaying of a young Hawaiian today for a solution to the deepening mystery of Joe Kahahawai's death.

Defiant after two days of bitter cross-examination, the wiry-haired lieutenant left the stand unshaken in his story that blankness shadowed his mind after Kahahawai confessed participating in an attack on 20-year-old Thalia Fortescue Massie.

Corroboration of Massie's testimony was expected when Clarence Darrow, shrewd director of defense maneuvers, announced one or possibly two of the remaining defendants would testify.

Albert O. Jones, veteran navy enlisted man, who with his "buddy," Edward J. Lord, was nearby when Kahahawai met violent death, was considered the most likely witness.

Mrs. Grace Bell Fortescue, the lieutenant's mother-in-law may testify as the only eye-witness but her distraught nerves possibly will prevent.

Massie's vivid description of how his tortured brain snapped under the strain of a three-months ordeal remained the highlight of the trial as Darrow began summoning minor witnesses.

Prosecutor John C. Kelley pounded on Massie's testimony in an attempt to trip him. Always a closed signal met the prosecutor as he approached the subject of Massie's "blackout."

Over and over he repeated the story—how he wanted a confession of the attack from Kahahawai to quiet unkind rumors about Mrs. Massie, and so spirited the native to his Fortescue's cottage; how he held a gun to "frighten" Kahahawai, who at last said, "Yes, we did it."

"I don't know what happened next," Massie insisted. "The next thing I knew, policemen in uniforms were taking me to the station. Kahahawai, they told me, was dead."

Before that, he shudderingly recalled the dark hours of his life's tragedy, beginning last September when his wife fell victim to a gang of five native hoodlums. She was broken in mind and body by the mistreatment, he said, and a "melting pot" jury refused to convict the attackers she named.

"She told me that she begged Kahahawai for mercy and he broke her jaw, laughing as he did it," repeated Massie, drawing a handkerchief over his furrowed brow.

"You planned to kill him, didn't you?" shouted the prosecutor.

"No, Mr. Kelley."

He remembered nothing, he continued, of how Kahahawai's body, wrapped in a sheet, came to be in an automobile speeding with Mrs. Fortescue, Lord and Massie toward Koko head keyser.

Dr. Paul Whittington, who attended Mrs. Massie after the attack, testified her husband visibly lost weight and was near collapse. Major Gordon Ross, high sheriff of Oahu, said Massie told him Kahahawai was "ready to crack" and asked the officer to question him.

Attorney Eugene H. Beede verified the navy officer's statement from one of the attackers was the only means of silencing the ugly rumors.

GOLD RUMOR BRINGS
MANY TO NOGALES

NOGALES, Ariz., April 19.—Drawn by rumors of a rich gold strike in the Altar Valley of Sonora, Mex., prospectors, adventurers and unemployed thronged this border city today, preparing to start for the scene.

Stories were current here that gold was being placer mined at the rate of $10,000 a week and that loose nuggets were being picked up in dry arroyos. They were discounted, however.

Ramon Elias, Nogales capitalist, was reported to have filed claims on large tracts and ordered equipment for mining.

LYNCH SLAYER OF KANSAS GIRL

"You are lynching the right man," said Richard Read, former Colorado convict, as an infuriated mob of western Kansas farmers dropped the noose around the man's neck. Then they hanged him from a tree. Read was taken from his jail cell at St. Francis after the sheriff had been overpowered and rushed to a spot near McDonald where he was lynched. He said he was intoxicated when he kidnapped eight-year-old Dorothy Hunter from her home at Selden, attacked her and then killed her. Read and the young Hunter girl are pictured above.

DOESN'T WANT SCOLDING

Girl Who Ran Away To Mexico Willing To Return
If She's Not Chastised

INWOOD, L. I., April 19.—Sixteen-year-old Florence Fiori, who took $300 and ran away from her home here seven months ago, is safe at Monterey, Mexico, but she would "rather be murdered than be scolded" when she gets back to Inwood.

Florence, a spelling champion of Nassau County, wants to go home now after a "Christmas and New Years spent crying," but when she gets there she'll stay "if I don't get the wanderlust again."

Her father, Joseph Fiori, made public a letter from his missing daughter which he received from her two weeks ago. Florence begged for forgiveness but requested there be no reproaches. She wants money to come back, but is being held at the United States consulate in Monterey until it arrives.

"When I ran away, I ran through our garden, jumped over the fence and lost one of my shoe heels," the letter from Florence said. "And to think I had to travel from New York to San Antonio, Texas, on one heel."

"I slept one night in the home of a farm woman in Austin, where I paid for a pair of shoes and bought a pair of white duck trousers and a man's shirt from her son. Honest, that's the way I entered Mexico—in pants."

"I had such amusing adventures. I was detained by a fat old Mexican who refused to let me cross the border. I tried to bribe him and I burst into tears, but it wasn't any use."

"Then a short but handsome young Mexican helped me. He told me to go back to Laredo, stay there overnight and return the next day. I did and the fat man was gone and the handsome young man let me pass."

"I've been living here with a little old Mexican lady so I haven't had any time to get thin. I'm still plump."

"If you try to scold me for running away, I'll do it again. I can't bear to be scolded—I'd rather be murdered. I know I'm to blame and I'm willing to beg for forgiveness on my knees, but I don't want a single reproach. It's bad enough to be humble."

"If you intend to scold, I'll never come back home. Never, never. If you can afford my passage, I'll come home and be Pollyanna again. That is, if I don't get the wanderlust again."

SEVEN HURT IN EFFORT TO FLEE COUNTY JAIL

CAMDEN, N. J., April 19.—Seven prisoners are in the hospital today and one may die as a result of injuries received in an attempted prison break in Camden County jail during the night.

A trusty, Raymond Archer, was the one so severely beaten it was feared he may die.

The three convicts participating in the escape attempt were Michael Quinn, Harry Schwartz, Philadelphia gunman, and Puffy Constantino, Philadelphia burglar.

The fight began when four trustees and two guards went into a section containing six prisoners. A pitcher of milk was dashed into the guards' face while other convicts seized the keys.

The felons unlocked the doors and ran into the passage which led to the warden's office. There Deputy Warden John Fritz awaited them with tear gas bombs. One door remained locked to bar their escape.

Fritz threw the bomb. The convicts retreated. Then aid arrived and the felons were overpowered.

WOMAN INDICTED
MCARTHUR, O., April 19.—Blanche M. Howell Steele, former treasurer of Vinton County whose term ended a few months ago, had been indicted today on charges of embezzlement of county funds. A report of state examiners fixed the amount of the shortage at $2,952.75. Her trial before Judge J. W. Darby probably will be held early in May.

ROOSEVELT ANSWER TO SMITH'S CHARGE AIDS HIS CAMPAIGN

Governor Comes Out Of Tiff With Flying Colors

ST. PAUL, Minn., April 19.—Gov. Franklin D. Roosevelt of New York today stood by his fight for economic justice for the "forgotten man" but made it clear he favors a public policy that is a true "concert of interests."

He replied before an audience of 5,000 in the Northwest's largest political rally to veiled charges of demagoguery made by his fellow contender for the Democratic presidential nomination, former Gov. Alfred E. Smith.

"I plead not for class control, but for a true concert of interests," Roosevelt said. "Two weeks ago I said we were facing an emergency today more grave than that of war. This I repeat."

He quoted Benjamin Franklin, Thomas Jefferson and his distant relatives, Theodore Roosevelt, as the "three Americans who are chiefly outstanding for the universality of their interest and of their knowledge." Each, he said, sympathized with the problems of the common man. Each believed one class should not be set up against another.

"It is to this national community of interest that we should dedicate ourselves. If that be treason, make the most of it," he said.

Roosevelt's address:

Attacked present public utility capital structures and corporate development.

Declared for strict government control of utilities and government operation in cases where satisfactory conditions for private operation could not be obtained.

Decreed electricity rates to small consumers as too high.

Demanded construction of a Great Lakes-to-the-seas waterway with ultimate provision of outlets via both the St. Lawrence and the all-American route.

Asked a scientific tariff policy based on reciprocal exchange of goods.

"I am pleading," said Roosevelt, "for a policy broad enough to include every part of our economic structure. A policy that seeks to help all simultaneously, that shows an understanding of the fact there are millions of our people who cannot be helped by merely helping employers because they are not employees—the farmers, the small business man, the professional people. In much of our present plans there is too much disposition to mistake the part for the whole, the head for the body."

"I favor economic planning." The only reference to Governor Smith by name was made in the discussion of the St. Lawrence project when Roosevelt called him "my distinguished predecessor."

The New York executive said he favored development of both the St. Lawrence and the so-called all-American seaway and said the most important factor was not which plan was started first but actual work on one of them.

A major portion of the governor's address was concerned with the public utility issue. Roosevelt declared himself for strict regulation and government operation in cases where private interests refused to operate on what seemed to be a reasonable basis.

"The government itself should not engage in the utility business if it can find private initiative and private capital willing to undertake the business for a reasonable and fair return on the capital necessary," Roosevelt said.

"If the government is not able to find private individuals or corporations willing to do this then government must step in and do it itself."

WILLYS HINTS AT REAL STORY

Doesn't Know What May Develop Here

NEW YORK, April 19.—John N. Willys intends to return to Poland within a week or ten days but doesn't know "what may develop" and may have "a real story in two or three days," he said on arrival here late last night aboard the Europa.

Willys, ambassador to Poland, had been reported returning to this country to resume his Willys-Overland automobile interest in Toledo. He was accompanied here by William Lettis, associated with a Great Britain automobile manufacturing plant.

The general sales tax, Willys declared, was the best way to balance the budget. He agreed with automobile manufacturers now presenting their arguments in congressional hearings against the special automobile excise tax.

Under the sales tax, he said, automobiles would pay the same as other industries, and "that is the only right tax."

THREE KILLED

FIND MUCH RADIUM IN VICTIM'S BODY

NEW YORK, April 19.—The largest quantity of radium ever found in a human body was discovered in the body of Eben M. Byers, Pittsburgh millionaire sportsman, who died here March 31, according to Dr. Charles Norris, chief medical examiner.

He revealed the radium content following a report from the city toxicologist. The report showed great amounts of radium in the bones, brain, lungs, liver and kidneys.

Death of Byers attracted attention to the sale of radium solution waters which caused death to at least one other individual and endangered over a hundred.

GOAT BUTTS IN

TOLEDO, O., April 19.—A goat walked into the office of the Medbury and Ward Printing Co. here after sauntering up a flight of stairs, and casually began to eat paper from a waste basket.

Girls in the office were as surprised to see the goat as the police who were called to see the goat. A police scout drew was called and the officers, with some difficulty, persuaded the goat to march downstairs. They returned him to the water works, where he is kept as a pet. The animal escaped by eating the rope with which he was tied.

Dryer, at San Diego, nine-year-old Hilda Brodsky, below, was returned home after being rescued from a similar experience. She is shown with Captain Edward Wilson, Wilmington, Del., detective, after she was shooed from an auto in front of the home of a Philadelphia priest. The father of the Rice boy is sought for questioning in the California case.

EATON UNABLE TO SELL LIGHT BONDS

EATON, O., April 19.—Hopes of Eaton citizens for a municipal light plant, approved by an eight-one majority at the polls last November, apparently have vanished as the result of the village council's action last night in repealing ordinances providing for such a plant.

It was expected negotiations would be begun with the Eaton Light Company, an Insull subsidiary for a renewal of the franchise which expired last Jan. 1.

Council members explained their move was based on the failure of The H. J. Osterfeldt company, Dayton, and themselves to obtain a buyer for the $233,000 in municipal bonds for the plant. The council refused to extend a fifty-day option held by the Dayton firm on the bonds.

LINDBERGH DENIES NEW CONTACT; ASKS
PRESS ASSISTANCE

HOPEWELL, N. J., April 19.—Col. Charles A. Lindbergh has denied that contact has been re-established with kidnapers of his son, as reported by "Falsie," and again has asked the press not to trail private negotiators.

The colonel's statement, besides contradicting one made by John F. Condon Sunday, declared that reports of demands for additional ransom were untrue. He pointed out the difficulty encountered by himself and his agents in activity to return his son due to reporters' tenacity in "continued following of our representatives."

The statement, which was more of a personal message to the press, than a news bulletin, said:

"The continued following of our representatives by members of the press is making it extremely difficult, if not impossible, to establish contact with whoever is in possession of our son. The publication of the demands for additional ransom, which have never been made, and of amounts which we are unable to pay, can cause nothing but greater difficulty."

"We are extremely anxious to reestablish contact with the kidnapers and while we sincerely appreciate the cooperation we have received from many press organizations, our attempts are still greatly hampered or made impossible by press activities. Up to the present we have been unable to reestablish a definite contact."

The liner Europa, docking yesterday at Brooklyn, was searched for the baby after an anonymous message said the infant was on board. The search was futile.

John Hughes Curtis, Norfolk negotiator, was reported in conference again yesterday with Lindbergh. His colleagues said there were no developments in Norfolk.

STRIKERS PREPARE TO PICKET SHAFTS; MAY HALT VIOLENCE

Operators Refuse To Arbitrate; Many
Near Starvation

CADIZ, O., April 19.—Troops redoubled their vigilance in the striking coal fields today as additional mines prepared to resume operations despite the increasing hostility of strike factions.

Six more shafts planned to resume activity with depleted forces in the wake of yesterday's outbreak when three pickets were wounded by militia fire. The shootings accentuated the tension.

The mines to be reopened today were in the vicinity of Beaverville, Guernsey County and Dillonville, Jefferson County. The Guernsey County mines have little protection since virtually all the National Guardsmen are concentrated in Harrison County.

Operators of the Tasa and Harmon Creek strip mines notified Col. William Marlin of Cleveland, commander of the troops in Harrison County, that they planned to reopen today.

One hope for a settlement of the strike died yesterday when Secretary of Labor Daugherty announced at Washington that operators had rejected an invitation to meet with union leaders there for a conference. Operators who refused represented 80 per cent of the production of the areas. Unionists had accepted the invitation.

The coal companies refusing to meet were: Y and O; Hanna; Cambria; United States; Warner; Ohio-Pennsylvania; Big Five; Lorain; Valley Camp; Clarkson; C. A. Nicholson; Balmigley; Sanders; Western; Doby; Carbondale; Salem Hollow; Black Diamond; Conville; Essex; New York; Sunday Creek; L. D. Poston; Ohio Coal; Cambridge; Black Pot; National and Akron.

Reports of a massed movement of strikers upon the Hocking Valley fields, scene of violence several weeks ago, were brought to National Guard headquarters, adding to the apprehension.

Scouts and two observation planes provided the intelligence department with information on the strikers' activities. The planes circled low over the hills just as dawn broke, seeking to verify reports of a massed invasion.

As other operators planned to resume activity, the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. Somers mine, scene of the current outbreak, prepared to increase its production schedule. Oddly, this mine was drawn into the strike by the refusal of a group of workers to join sympathetically in the general movement even though their wage scale had not been reduced. Union officials maintain such a reduction was planned.

Strike leaders, seeking to placate their forces, charge radical and "communist" elements with agitating violence. The leaders declare they will exert only lawful and peaceful influences in drawing workers from the pits. They attributed yesterday's massed march and accompanying bloodshed to a misunderstanding of marchers that they would be allowed to picket peacefully.

As the opposing factions continued their struggle, the spectre of starvation cast its shadow over the district. A group of union officials appealed to Adj. Gen. Frank D. Henderson to set up a soup kitchen in Fairpoint, where they also asked for a consignment of red cross flour. Henderson promised his assistance.

Union officials reiterated today the need of a higher wage scale, which operators say is impossible because of general conditions.

"Men have worked steady in the mines for five years and never received a nickel in cash," J. H. McGrew, a Belmont County leader, said.

FOODY LEGION POST IN FAVOR OF IMMEDIATE PAYMENT OF BONUS

Strong sentiment in favor of immediate payment of the soldiers' cash bonus was voiced by members of Joseph P. Foody Post, No. 95, American Legion, when a belated poll of the post membership was taken at a meeting Monday night.

An expression regarding the attitude of all Ohio Legion posts on proposed payment of the remaining 50 per cent due on adjusted compensation certificates had been sought by the state department of the Legion. The vote of Foody

Post members was taken in conformity with this request.

With 105 Legionnaires present, a majority voted in favor of immediate payment, although a number of the ex-servicemen refused to indicate their preference.

Prior to the meeting at which a vote on the bonus proposition was taken, members of the post and women's auxiliary responded to an emergency mobilization order.

The mobilization call was signaled by the ringing of the bell in the fire engine house about 7:30 p. m., and within a short space of time 102 Legionnaires and forty-one members of the auxiliary had assembled and registered at post hall in the basement of the Court House.

The mobilization order, held to ascertain the ability of Legionnaires to assemble quickly in case of a sudden emergency, applied to all Legion posts in the state.

After assembling, the Legionnaires and members of the auxiliary listened to a Legion program over a national radio hook-up and the Auxiliary served lunch.

REORGANIZATION OF COMMERCIAL BANK IS BEING ADVANCED

Plans for reorganization and reopening of the Commercial and Savings Bank Co., which closed its doors February 23, are somewhat farther advanced, it was reported following a second meeting of stockholders of the institution Monday afternoon at the Masonic Temple.

Attorney W. L. Miller, member of the board of directors and legal advisor for the bank, who has been playing a leading role in the reorganizing movement, declared after the meeting that strong sentiment for reorganization still appears to exist but that no definite action was reached at the meeting Monday.

"We are continuing our efforts along the same lines as before," he announced.

This statement was believed to indicate that not all of the fifty-three stockholders have been interviewed on the reorganization proposition.

A sub-committee composed of Dr. F. M. Chambliss, Oliver Belden, Frederick Anderson and Adolph Moser was appointed to get in personal touch with those stockholders from whom a definite expression on the proposition has not been obtained.

STARTLING-- DIFFERENT--

A Canvas Shoe Without Seams --- Without Stitches

Can you imagine a canvas shoe without seams and stitches? This is now possible because of a revolutionary discovery by Goodrich called the Xtrulock process. This new process moulds a shoe into one complete, smooth unit. There are no stitches or inside seams to irritate feet or wear out stockings. The shoes can be washed with ordinary soap and water. They wear well and have a neat appearance. Ask to see these new Goodrich Sport Shoes, and you'll be surprised at the price.

Why Risk MILLIONS To Gain One?

Would you risk millions of dollars in an effort to win one dollar?
Of course not, but—

Would you risk millions of minutes in an effort to gain one minute?

Don't answer too quickly; you've probably done it dozens of times.

Every time you attempt to pass another car when the view ahead is not quite long enough to do it in safety; every time you step up the speed of your car to a point just a little higher than the condition of the highway, the density of traffic, the condition of your tires or your own condition warrants; every time you enter a blind intersection or cross roads at a speed too fast to stop in time if another driver suddenly approached from your right; every time you take one of these unnecessary risks just to get where you're going a minute or two earlier, you're risking millions of minutes to save one.

Figure it out for yourself. There are roughly 525,000 minutes in a year. That's five and a quarter million minutes for each ten years you may expect to live. Yet if in one of these efforts to save a minute, that other car just happens to appear in the wrong place at the wrong time, or if a front tire blows or the turn in the road proves sharper than you expected, you may pay five, ten, fifteen or twenty million minutes of your life in a vain effort to save just one!

SHAKESPEARE "FACTORY"

But condemn us not unheard, gentle reader, for reference in this wise to the new Shakespeare Memorial Theatre to be dedicated by the Prince of Wales at its opening, pril 23, in Stratford-upon-Avon. Description of the new building as a "factory" has no less a source than the columns of the dignified and loyal Manchester Guardian.

Incidentally, the dedication date is the 316th anniversary of Will Shakespeare's death and what is assumed to be the 368th anniversary of his birth. The exact birth-date is not known, though scholars have fixed April 23 by estimation from the date of his baptism recorded in the parish register.

The design of the new theatre has already caused furious argument. Some term the huge block of red brick topped with a great square tower "a gaol, a workhouse, an electric power-station, a furniture warehouse, and a jam factory." But to Sir Archibald Flower and those who see eye to eye with him "the governing idea has been to build a theatre where the very best technique can be applied to the interpretation of the plays." Since Archibald's devoted efforts have been principally responsible for the successful direction of world-wide enthusiasm and the contribution of more than $1,000,000, including approximately $500,000 from the United States, it is safe to assume that he would not have permitted too great a sin against good taste or the spirit of the theatre which is to be served.

On the contrary the outward form is conceded to have been dictated by the inner needs of stage production. The tower, for instance, is simply an enormous fly gallery into which scenery for a dozen Shakespearean productions can be stored 70 feet above the stage. The stage itself is almost as big as the auditorium which seats 1,200 persons. Mechanisms, chief among them a rolling or "jack-knife" stage such as was used in Detroit in the production of "Grand Hotel," permits the continuous procession of scenes, as plays were given in Shakespeare's own time. This rolling stage is considered less clumsy than the revolving stage. But in addition, a second stage below the first is included in the equipment. A short apron or platform jutting beyond the proscenium is the only concession to the appearance of the Elizabethan play-house.

Decorative combinations of natural woods, with chromium plating where metal must be used, add to the modern effect throughout. Terraces, gardens, a foyer overlooking the Avon, a restaurant and a conference room built from the ruins of the old theatre occupy other space in the architectural whole. While the present effect of the new brick rising above old roofs and timbered houses in Stratford is perhaps startling, time and the elements are to be depended upon to give the memorial the softer tones of age.

So will be inaugurated the "factory for the production of Shakespeare's plays by the most up-to-date methods," which would be a revelation and doubtless a delight to Master Will.

THE MIXTECS

South American archaeologists and philologists are indefatigable students of New World antiquities, particularly of those lying to the southward of the Rio Grande. So it is not surprising to read that Dr. Herman Walde-Walberg, of the Colombian National Library in Bogota believes that after long study he has succeeded in deciphering some of the hieroglyphs of the Mixtecs who flourished in the southern part of Mexico in pre-Spanish times (they are still numerous extant) and developed a civilization closely allied to that of the Mayas. Recently, by the way, the Mixtecs came into notice because of the discovery of some notable sepulchral remains left by them.

It appears that Dr. Walde-Walberg has used as his principal source of study the Borgia codex of the Vatican library, and according to report he concludes that the writing thereon bears a definite relationship to Chinese, Japanese and Sanscrit, which if true would give it a decidedly mixed and complex origin.

But the most curious part of the story, and the least immediately convincing, is the statement that the doctor bases his conclusion considerably on an assumed relationship between the Feathered Serpent which was symbol of the God Quetzalcoatl and the Chinese Flying Dragon. It is true that in one of its aspects, Quetzalcoatl was god of the air. But there is a big difference between a snake covered with Central American bird plumage and a dragon; and the Feathered Serpent is emphatically the former, not the latter. Or if it is to be compared with an Old World conception of the Dragon, it is more like the Lindworm that Siegfried slaughtered than it is like the grotesque mythical reptile of the Far East. In that connection it may not be out of place to remember that tradition makes the humanized Quetzalcoatl a visitor from regions beyond the Atlantic rather than from regions beyond the Pacific. As to the face found invariably between the jaws of the Feathered Serpent, it has as much resemblance to the head of Hercules looking out from under the jaws attached to his lion skin as it has to any Oriental mask.

There is great peril of error in trying to deduce too much from surface or general resemblance between pre-Columbian culture in America and the cultures of the Eastern hemisphere. Many archaeologists have forgotten that to their confusion.

ONLY 8% OF THE MARKET

Only eight out of every 100 typical American homes receive the message of the advertiser who buys radio broadcasting time. This striking comment on the weakness of radio as an advertising medium is disclosed by a survey recently made by the country's largest advertising association.

The survey, made under the most favorable radio reception conditions, between the hours of 8:30 and 9:30 p. m., when the number of radio listeners is at its peak, reveals that the advertising conscious radio audience is but 8 per cent of the possible market.

Of the other 92 per cent some are absent from home, some do not own radios, some are listening but do not know to what station, others cannot identify the advertising sponsor of the program. For this sort of advertising reception, some advertisers pay tremendous sums for time on the air, for talent to call attention to their programs and, if the program is a chain broadcast, additional sums for each station in the hook-up.

Careless expenditure of advertising funds is the rankest sort of waste. To the newspapers which carry the message of the advertiser into the homes of the nation, giving a tremendously high percentage of coverage with a product of known and approved merit that is the most widely read medium in the world, such waste is astounding.

In accomplishing its purpose as a disseminator of news and a medium of advertising, the newspaper realizes that it has been doing a splendid job. It, therefore, finds itself interested, if not amused, by this vast purveyor of waste, as indicated when measured by the same yardstick by which the newspaper measures its own service to the advertising space buyer.

It now appears that even the automobile and wrist watches the broadcaster gives away, are absorbed by 8 per cent of the people he hopes to reach.

Thus bursts the bubble of another excursion into alluring, but untrue, sales and advertising methods.

MY NEW YORK

By JAMES ASWELL

NEW YORK — The run of the town.

Eighth avenue—signs in succession in the trolleys—ads for the Polish Democratic club for Stuyvesant Day Nursery, for Joe's Real Hungarian food, for the Russian Methodist Episcopal church. Signs in shop windows: "For Lease, by Sailors. One u g Harbor." S n e of the richest holding corporations in the world.

Watching the James Aswell gossip columnist at work in the night clubs, being fawed over by those who hope for a line of mention in any connection whatsoever—if it's only mention. I must call up the weather bureau and find out whether it really snows every April.

Bared-head young man in the rain. Hat business has been seriously hit by the popular superstition that lack of head gear will prevent baldness, a superstition, doctors tell me, without the slightest physiological basis. Little girls in mark-down spring frocks hungrily peering into shining windows along Fifth avenue. Food lack, after all, is one of the minor causes of starvation.

Envelopes of stars' fan mail, salvaged from Hollywood ash cans, are bringing good money in west coast curio stores. Chevalier, Dietrich, Swanson and Garbo letters bring as high as $1 each. In his next picture Johnny Weissmuller will be a trader among Eskimos.

Automobile manufacturers are experimenting with upholstery fabrics which will be advertised as adding life to men's suits. The new economy spirit. I am assured that the usefulness of a pair of pants can be stretched many months through the choice of one textile instead of another.

DANGER

The Village landlady of a friend of mine is an ex-pug who has embraced the profession of the men who remove the wire fencing set up on skyscrapers under construction to protect the faces of riveters. He scouts about the steel framework daily, but his wife has never worried until recently.

Now she's frantic. Hubby has just bought a small coupe and spends his spare time taking driving lessons. When he departs for a session at the wheel, she approaches nervous prostration.

"Driving nowadays is so dangerous," she protested, over and over, to all tenants who will listen.

TRIVIA

Movie titles show a current tendency toward length. Time was when the short caption usually meant the super-super production.

"Intolerance," "Variety," "Passion," "Greedy" and so on. Now there are titles like "The Rich Are Always With Us." A man can change his name in New York state, provided his intentions are plainly non-fraudulent. Woodrow Wilson and Grover Cleveland both changed their monickers, and so did Ulysses S. Grant. I'll wager the S in Grant's name is printed with a period after it. S. in most of the papers in which this appears, but if it is, the general's name will be misspelled. The S stood for nothing at all, so properly it has no dot following it.

The life of a radio writer on a metropolitan paper is one of the toughest grinds there is. He must sit up all hours of the night listening to programs to get copy for his stint. One of them estimated to me the other day that he spends 35 hours a week with his set turned on.

SENATORS STUMPED; STOCK MARKET INQUIRY MAKES LITTLE HEADWAY

WASHINGTON.—If Prof. Albert Einstein were called as a witness, to explain relativity to a congressional committee, one can readily imagine that the committee would have considerable difficulty in cross-examining the professor into any admissions that he did not desire to make.

The senate committee on banking and currency is in about his fix in dealing with its Wall Street witnesses, in an effort to learn the real significance of the bulls' and bears' stock exchange activities.

Committee member Frederic C. Walcott of Connecticut to be sure, has had some stock experience, but it was amateurish. While he is fairly familiar with the speculative jargon, it is obvious that he is far from competent to spar with a professional.

There are two groups of members of the bank and currency committee.

One group, headed by Senator Walcott, an enthusiastic plunger for President Hoover, desires to prove that a bear market on the market has been, and still is, persistently depressing stock prices, thus nullifying efforts of the administration to restore prosperity by such means as the moratorium, the bankers' pool and the Reconstruction Finance corporation.

The opposition group, led by Senator Smith of New York, is bent on showing that there would not be any depression had it not been for the post-war boom, for which the Hawkeye statesman seeks to hold the Harding and Coolidge regimes responsible—and the Hoover regime also, until the boom exploded.

In brief Senator Walcott is a bear hunter; Senator Brookhart's object is bull-baiting.

It may seem as if they ought to be able to make matters rather embarrassing for the market traders, converging upon them from both directions in this fashion.

The fact is, however, that the bulls and bears, however vigorously they may strive to slaughter one another, immediately join forces to resist outside interference with their game, and naturally understanding its rules vastly better than it is possible for the banking and currency probes to learn them in a hurry, simply laugh the investigation off in a good-natured way.

It is precisely, as previously remarked, as Professor Einstein might be expected to do if a congressional committee were trying to make a monkey out of him on the subject of relativity.

On the whole perhaps Senator Brookhart has scored more points than Senator Walcott in the course of the inquiry to date.

The brokers do not propose to concede that their trade can possibly be so manipulated as to prolong the depression, much less that it actually has been so manipulated. Indeed, President Richard Whitney of the New York exchange has specifically declared from the witness stand that such an idea is "perfectly ridiculous."

On the other hand, they have no objection whatever to admitting that official Washington influences had a great deal to do with encouragement of the boom—this admission being calculated to remove blame from their own shoulders.

But the truth is that the investigation gives little promise as yet of uncovering much information of genuine importance—nothing that nearly everyone does not know already, anyway.

Perhaps the stock exchange folk have nothing important to reveal.

Perhaps the investigators merely are insufficiently versed in market technicalities to wring it out of them.

It is hopeless for an inexperienced listener to judge whether, in reality, the business of the stock exchange folk is the simple matter of ordinary swapping back and forth which they represent it to be, or whether there is some sort of black magic connected with it, as the public undoubtedly believes there is.

If it's enough to puzzle the average person, why shouldn't it puzzle a senatorial investigating committee?

After all, senators are only average folk, with official titles.

"THE SPRING RETURNS"

The Spring returns! What matters than that War On the horizon like a beacon burns That Death ascends, man's most desired star.

That Darkness is his hope? The Spring returns! Triumphant through the wider-arched cope She comes, he comes, unto her tyranny.

And at her coronation are set ope The prisons of the mind, and man is free!

The beggar-garbed or over-bent with snows, Each mortal, long defeated, disallowed.

Feeling her touch, grows stronger limbed, and knows The purple on his shoulders and is proud.

The Spring returns! O madness beyond sense, Breed in our bones' thine own omnipotence!

—Charles Leonard Moore (1854—)

Staff of Life Has High Food Value

By LOGAN CLENDENING, M. D.

Some of the best and most nutritious parts of our diet we regard as side issues—mere accessories. Bread and butter! Just to be eaten with the other things.

The good things about butter were considered yesterday. Its content of the growth vitamin—vitamin A! Its digestibility. Its concentrated energy value. Its content of substances which step up which spar the process of nutrition.

What about bread? Various breads differ somewhat in composition but, in general, bread is 36 per cent water, 63 per cent organic substances, and 1 per cent inorganic ash. The organic substances are about 10 per cent protein, 52 per cent starch and sugar, and 1 per cent fat. In minerals it is rich in iron, has a good content of phosphorus and it is poor in calcium—just the opposite of milk, which makes bread and milk a good supplementary diet.

If bread is made with milk instead of water, the calcium content is increased.

Vitamins are not present in bread to any extent. In fact, it is the outstanding example of a food which is nutritious in every respect except the presence of those subtle elements which are necessary to life.

Whole wheat bread contains some vitamin B but much of that is destroyed in the process of baking.

The energy value of bread is high—1200 calories per pound. An average loaf of bread weighs a pound and a half. So two loaves of bread would furnish nutrition to an average sized person for a day. In other words, for the reducer, it is "fattening."

Summarizing the advantages and disadvantages of bread from a nutritional standpoint, on account of its low water content it is, weight for weight, of high energy value compared to other foods.

It must be eaten as an accessory to other foods, because it is far from a complete food. Used as the sole article of diet it would get the consumer into trouble because of first, its low vitamin content; second, its very low fat content; third, its small proportion of protein. (In an ideal diet the protein is 1 to 4 of carbohydrate: in bread it is 1 to 7 or 8).

Used as it customarily is with other foods—butter to make up the fat content, milk to make up the protein and vitamins, or in the form of sandwiches with meat or lettuce, etc.—it is in its true place as a splendid form of concentrated energy.

NOTES AND QUERIES

"Alfred Adler was the first to point out that an individual can say 'No' to life in terms of organic symptoms indistinguishable from the symptoms of disease. Adler demonstrated the fact that the total organism takes an attitude toward the problems of his adjustment to reality, and that where this adjustment is faulty, and the individual feels that he cannot meet his obligations, he saves his 'face' by substituting an organic 'I cannot' for the more humiliating admission, 'I will not because I fear I shall fail!'" —Written by W. Beran Wolfe, M. D., in Medical Economics, March, 1932.

L. R. L.: "Will you please tell me what is a remedy for syphilis in its first stages?"

Answer: The standard treatment for syphilis in the early stages is by the use of one or a combination of three drugs—mercury, arsenophenamine and bismuth. What drug is used and how it is used depends upon the age of the patient, the severity of the disease, and what part of the body is attacked, etc.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: You have been of so much help to others that I am going to ask you to help me.

"I am a widow and in comfortable circumstances. I own my own home and car. I always have done as I pleased, being allowed all the freedom in the world.

I have been recently asked to marry an old friend of mine, who is four years younger than myself. He is very jealous of me and does not believe in my going out as I do with the car alone, and always says that if I were his wife I would have none of my former privileges.

"Please advise me, Miss Lee, as you have others. Do you think I could be happy under these circumstances?" S. E. A.

If your friend means what he says I can't imagine that you would be happy at all, married to him. S. E. A.

After years of freedom to have a man nagging about where you have been and what you have been doing and with whom you have been would be simply torture. You wouldn't stand it, I'm sure.

Your friend probably would deeply resent any curtailment of his freedom after marriage or before. Why should he try to limit yours?

"BROKEN HEARTED."

Heavy Hearted was the woman who had played around with married men until she fell in love with one whom she married. Then she found that as he had been untrue to his first wife for her, so he was untrue to her. And she could say nothing for she had encouraged him in his first infidelity.

Let me say, good luck to you both.

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am writing this letter with humiliation, as I read the letter from Heavy Hearted. It brings unpleasant things to me that have and are happening in my life. I just want to say this, Heavy Hearted, God is yet on his throne and he is saying to us, 'Your sins are forgiven; go and sin no more.'"

"I am going to leave this man I also married. I can't endure this any longer. Do I know what wives suffer? Yes, indeed, Heavy Hearted, I wish I could see you. I am going to a different town, and by the grace of God I will start all over again. Look up, get away and refuse to let the devil claim you. I too will say, 'Girls and women, stick to your virtue.'"

"BROKEN HEARTED."

Heavy Hearted was the woman who had played around with married men until she fell in love with one whom she married. Then she found that as he had been untrue to his first wife for her, so he was untrue to her. And she could say nothing for she had encouraged him in his first infidelity.

Let me say, good luck to you both.

How To Get Hair Sleek And Smart

By GLADYS GLAD

One of the chief features of some of our latest coiffures is the closeness with which they are molded to the head. To achieve ultra-smartness in the execution of these coiffures the hair must be made to follow the natural contours of the head perfectly. And in some cases lacquer is being used on the arranged coiffure so that every glossy hair remains smoothly in place.

This is, of course, an extreme fad that may probably never achieve common popularity. But nevertheless, the idea of gloss, smoothness and meticulous arrangement is the basis of a good many of the hair styles now commonly in vogue. Which makes it somewhat tough for our dry-haired sisters. Because, due to the dryness, those poor babies have rather a difficult time trying to keep their tresses smoothly in place.

When the hair is in a very dry, unmanageable condition, corrective treatments such as the hot castor oil treatments described in my "Beauty Culture" booklet should be administered to restore the hair and scalp to perfect health. But in addition to this the hair may be given gloss and endurance to remain smoothly in place through the use of plain mineral oil.

In many of the liquid brilliancies on the market mineral oil is the chief ingredient. Some manufacturers add a bit of coloring and a bit of alcohol to their brilliancies, or a little glycerine. And for this reason I feel that the plain mineral oil is better for use on dry hair than such preparations. For the mineral oil unquestionably nourishes the scalp, while both alcohol and glycerine may tend to dry the hair further.

When using the mineral oil on the hair a very little bit only should be applied. A dry or two of the oil may be rubbed between the hands, and then the hair smoothed down with the oiled hands. Or a brush may be used for applying the oil. In this case, a few drops of the oil should be placed in the palm of the hand, and the brush rubbed over it. Then the hair should be lightly smoothed down with the slightly oiled brush. Try it if you have dry, fly-away hair—and see if it doesn't add gloss and keep your locks smoothly in place!

Gray Hair

H. M.: If you can't afford to have your hair dyed by an expert, you can try using sage tea. Make a rather strong solution of the tea and brush it through your hair after the hair has been shampooed and dried.

Teeth

Gloria and Georgiana: If you have the tartarous and calcareous matter removed from your teeth by a good dentist, proper cleansing with a reliable dentifrice will keep them white and sparkling.

Editor's Note: While it is impossible for Miss Glad to answer beauty questions by mail, she will be happy to send you her pamphlets on "The New Figure" and "Beauty Culture" if you will write her, care of this paper, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope and ten cents in coin for each, to cover cost of printing and handling. For her articles on "Care of the Hands and Nails" and "Care of the Feet and Legs," two cents in coin for each, and a self-addressed, stamped envelope are required. Personal questions on beauty will be answered through Miss Glad's daily column.

Our Cat, Our Rat We Taught the Cat Not to Eat the Rat

The instant our cat saw the white rat he made a lunge for it. He was a cat, wasn't he? That was a rat, wasn't it? Rats are made for cats, aren't they? And cats are made to eat rats. Didn't a profound philosopher named William James once remark that it is destiny of cats to be eaten by rats, and that the rats do not object as thoroughly as human beings may suppose?

Very well then, our normal cat tried to catch that normal white rat, and the family had to drive him away.

Then he was lectured. He was told very definitely, in short, sharp words, that this inquisitive little white animal with the quivering whiskers and the pink bulging eyes belonged to the children and to the family. It did NOT belong to him, he was NOT to kill it; he was to let it alone completely.

Our cat didn't like it. He growled and he switched his tail and he shook all over and he complained. He said: "This is a fine way to treat a cat. You won't let me catch snakes in the garden. When I do catch one you take it away from me and hold me tight while the scaly green thing wiggles off into a hole in a rock."

"And NOW you won't let me catch rats. All right! then I guess I'll go in the garden and eat worms—will that be all right?"

So outside he went, sulking all the way.

Last night our cat was in the kitchen. He hadn't been feeling very well, but now he was better and purring a

SPORT SNAP SHOTS FRAMED by Phil

The Cuban House of David traveling baseball club, another bearded aggregation of ball players, may appear here Saturday afternoon, April 30.

George Ewing, business manager of the Xenia Merchants, has been negotiating for a game to be played here on that date and has tentatively booked the Cubans.

The Cubans, with fifteen high-salaried players on the roster, beat some of the best minor league clubs last season, including Newark of the International League, and the Birmingham, Ala. Barons.

Incidentally, Manager Ewing indicates that if the patronage at the Sunday matinee games of the Xenia Merchants here does not show improvement, the local club will be converted into a road team this season and play games away from this city.

Softball returns to the spotlight in Xenia next Monday evening and ten teams enrolled in the local competition in the two leagues are devoting this week to "spring training."

Quite a few players invaded Cox Field for a little pre-season practice Sunday afternoon, but the number was not as large as had been expected, the day being ideal.

Bob Shaw, though his name appears on the eligibility list of the Xenia Chick Hatchery softball team, declares he has decided not to play with any team this season. Last year Bob played in the outfield for Wood's Barbers and was one of the best batters in the National League. His decision not to play will probably come as a blow to the hopes of the Hatchery team.

George Prugh, star shortfielder for the Downtown team last season, is on deck again, notwithstanding this department's recent prediction he would not be around these parts this season.

Police Chief O. H. Cornwell was sorry to miss the recent baseball opener at Cincinnati, but he just couldn't spare the time. Furthermore, he had been promised a ticket by Col. Bob Newhall, well known sports announcer of WLW. The Xenia police chief is a personal friend of Newhall, dating back to the days when they were in the army together. Col. Newhall told Chief Cornwell recently that he devotes an average of ten hours a day preparing his daily sports talks on radio that last only fifteen minutes.

CEDARVILLE LOSES TO BLUFFTON AFTER RALLY FALLS SHORT

Three-Run Rally Falls Too Short in 4 To 3 Game

A three-run rally in the last half of the eighth inning fell just shy of evening the score, and Cedarville College's baseball team was beaten by Bluffton College of the Northwest Ohio Conference, 4 to 3 in a diamond engagement at Cedarville Monday afternoon.

Blanked by Miami University, 5 to 0, last Saturday, the Yellow Jackets stretched their string of scoreless innings to sixteen before a walk, single and a pair of doubles combined to produce a trio of tallies in the eighth round of the Bluffton contest.

Spencer walked for a starter and Kitchen singled. A two-bagger by Rife scored both runners. Both struck out but Murray connected for another double, scoring Rife. With the tying run on second, the next two batters were retired.

Bluffton had built up a four-run lead in the first six innings, scoring two runs in the first, one in the fourth and what proved to be the winning marker in the sixth.

Bluffton played errorless ball in the field, while the Borstmen were charged with four fielding miscues. Charles Spencer, a promising member of Coach R. M. Borst's hurling staff, made his first start as a pitcher and pitched a fine brand of ball. He fanned eight batters and allowed only eight hits.

Johnson, Bluffton hurler, permitted only six hits and retired a dozen batters on strikeouts.

Stewart Kitchen, left fielder, who obtained two singles was the only Cedarville player to hit safely more than once. Three hits, all one-baggers, rang off the bat of Leatherman. Bluffton third baseman. Score by innings:

Bluffton 2 0 0 1 0 1 0 0 4
Batteries: Bluffton—Johnson and Schlott; Cedarville—Spencer and Rutan.

WILL INSURE HIGH SCHOOL ATHLETES AGAINST INJURIES

State Association Working Out Plan For Insurance

COLUMBUS, O., April 19.—Beginning with the 1932 football season, Ohio high school athletes will be insured against injury.

The board of control of the Ohio High School Athletic Association at a meeting here next Friday night will adopt a plan to insure athletes hurt in a regular game or in practice.

Commissioner H. R. Townsend of the state association and the representative of an insurance company will meet with the board of control to consider an insurance proposal. The board has virtually assured that it will adopt the plan.

An insurance system would provide for payment of medical or hospital bills incurred by youths hurt while participating in scholastic sports. At present, either the school must pay such expense or it falls to the athlete's family. Many schools have been financially unable to meet these bills.

A recent questionnaire sent to Ohio high schools revealed a vast majority in favor of some kind of insurance.

POLICE RECOVER FLEEING PORKER

MANSFIELD, O., April 19.—Detective J. Grant Alvord received nearly a score of telephone calls reporting a large pig roaming aimlessly through the main streets. When police arrived at the given spot they found the pig had a following of nearly sixty boys. Pa-agreed that Governor Franklin D. Roosevelt came out with flying colors in his tilt with Alfred E. Smith, rival candidate for the Democratic presidential nomination.

The New York governor's plea at St. Paul, Minn., for an economic program to benefit all classes was generally viewed as having discredited Smith's indirect charge that Roosevelt was a "demagogue" seeking to put class against class.

Many considered that Smith, in centering attention on Roosevelt's views, had actually aided the governor's campaign.

Anti-Roosevelt men here in effect conceded that Smith's accusations had fallen flat when they said the incident should be considered closed. They declined to comment publicly on Roosevelt's St. Paul address.

Movie "Wet Parade" Reported Well Made

"The Wet Parade," Upton Sinclair's convincing novel dealing with the liquor problem, was made into a grand movie by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer in the opinion of the reviewing committee of the Daughters of the American Revolution, which has just given it highest rating in its current review release.

Admitting a certain sordidness, the committee points out that the film is so human and so realistic that it grips interest, although it is recommended chiefly for adults. Lewis Stone, Walter Huston, Dorothy Jordan and Robert Young give the finest performances in this picture, which was directed by Victor Fleming.

Whimsical entertainment with John Boles, Joan Bennett and good support is provided by "Careless Lady". Fox's picture which stands second on the D. A. R. approved list.

LEWIS STONE

The committee recommends the saucy comedy, "One Hour With You" for adults but stamps it as being too risqué for junior. The picture in a Paramount interpretation of a story by Lothar Schmidt and was directed by Ernst Lubitsch with Maurice Chevalier and Jeanette MacDonald as principals.

The play "After Tomorrow", by Hugh Strange and John Golden, is offered by Fox as good entertainment for the entire family. It is a Charles Farrell and Marian Nixon vehicle and Minna Gombell and William Collier Jr. are others in the cast.

A picture in pantomime, filmed on the island of Nosy-be, off the mainland of Madagascar with natives in the cast, is recommended for the family audience. It is called "Cain" and was made by Talking Picture Epics.

"Police Court", by Monogram is expertly acted and directed, the committee says. "Wayward" by Paramount is a family film based on the novel "Wild Beauty" by Mateel Howe Farnham with Nancy Carroll, Richard Arlen and Pauline Frederick in the leads. "Girl Crazy", by RKO, is a musical farce featuring Eddie Quillen, Robert Woolsey and Bert Wheeler.

"Disorderly Conduct", a Fox version of William Anthony McGuire's story, exposes police graft and will interest adults especially.

The committee recommends only with slightly less ardor, "Dancers in the Dark", Paramount version of "Jazz King" with Miriam Hopkins and Jack Oakie; "Steady Company", a Universal romance with Norman Foster, June Clyde and Zasu Pitts; "The Devil's Lottery", a Fox drama; "Impatient Maiden", Universal comedy drama with Una

SCOUT TRAINING
CLASS PLANS TRIP

Members of the Boy Scout Leaders' Training School will take a trip to Camp Miami for their first outdoor meeting Saturday afternoon, April 30, it was announced at the fifth session of the classes at the Scout room, W. Main St., Monday evening.

Following the opening ceremony "good turns" were reported and patrol leaders' records were discussed. Dr. J. A. Yoder requested Scoutmasters to appoint a publicity agent in each troop to report proceedings to troop meetings so the public may become better acquainted with Scouting methods.

The game, "earth, air, fire and water" was played under the direction of Glenn Johnson, signaling was demonstrated and first aid kits were shown. The meeting closed with the Scout benediction.

HE'S AN OPTIMIST

Not content with canvassing voters in his own county, Thomas C. Brown, Democratic candidate for sheriff of Brown County, seventy-five miles away, did a little pre-primary electioneering in Greene County Saturday. He left his card at the home of Common Pleas Judge R. L. Gowdy, who has always found it necessary to vote in Greene County and anticipates no immediate departure from custom. Judge Gowdy also happens to be a Republican.

for better taste

CIGARETTE smokers owe a lot to Turkish tobacco, for it was cigarettes made out of Turkish tobacco that first became the vogue in this country.

Then it was found that a blend of Turkish and Domestic tobaccos was better than either kind of tobacco straight. It takes just the right amount of the right kind of Turkish tobacco to give a cigarette better taste. For Turkish tobacco is to cigarettes what seasoning is to food—the spice—the sauce. You want enough but not too much.

There is just enough Turkish in CHESTERFIELDS to give them a better flavor, a more pleasing aroma; to make them taste better.

Turkish tobacco must pay an import duty of 35c a pound; but cost doesn't count when it comes to making CHESTERFIELD the best cigarette that science and money can produce.
